

Should I change investment options?

Although it may be tempting to switch investment options, now may not be the best time to do so. Research has shown that people who stay put and ride out down turns in the market often do better than people who switch. Changing into lower risk options is also risky as history shows that on average the share market generally outperforms cash.

There are no safe options. Even cash can have risks from time to time. You need to keep your long-term goals in mind and weigh up return vs. risk levels.

If you are concerned about market volatility, now could be a good time to review your situation, but before you make any changes make sure you speak to a qualified financial planner. Vision Super has a team of financial planners that can sit down with you and work through your retirement goals and the best ways to achieve them. Phone Member Services on 9911 3222 (regional callers 1300 300 820) to find out the steps involved in seeking planning advice.
